1. People: Your mobile strategy isn’t just an IT initiative. It impacts people all across your company, including the executive team, HR, line-of-business managers, legal, procurement — anyone and everyone who uses mobile technology. Ensuring that all of your potential end users understand and support your mobile strategy is key to its success. Our goal is to bring all of your key stakeholders into the mobile strategy process to ensure their needs and interests are heard and addressed.

2. Devices: Every mobile strategy has to address questions that go beyond which devices and operating systems to support. For instance, what type(s) of device ownership will you enable and who will pay for it? Whether you allow employees to bring their own devices (BYOD) or provide corporate-owned devices, our workshop will help you determine which type of device program and security approach is right for your company.

3. Networks: Ensuring mobile workers can securely access the apps and content they need wherever they work can be a daunting challenge. Our strategic consultants will provide more insight about how to best design your network for mobile, as well as how to manage and pay for data plans for your users.

4. Apps: Building an app store for your company requires more than just choosing business apps. Our strategic consulting workshop provides greater insight into critical app management processes such as app store governance and security requirements, end-user needs, deployment guidelines and more.

5. Content: How can you securely enable your mobile users to quickly access to the content they use for work every day? In this workshop, you will learn how to develop a content management strategy for storing, delivering, and enforcing content security policies.
